

Update on the Quality Standards for Services Supporting Male Victims of Sexual Violence

Becky York, Head of SV Consultancy LimeCulture

Background

Our Commitment

LimeCulture is committed to reinvigorating the relevance of The Male Quality Standards and assuring their effectiveness.

Our aim is to ensure the standards:

- Reflect the latest best practice in supporting male victims/survivors of sexual violence
- Provide a robust framework that does not stifle innovation
- Are aligned with emerging insights and sector needs

The Independent Accreditation Programme will continue to ensure that services supporting male victims/survivors:

- Consistently meet the highest standards
- Demonstrate accountability and transparency in their support for male victims/survivors
- Are recognised through an objective, Independent Quality Mark

Principles

Victim-Centred and Trauma-Informed - Standards will ensure services remain safe, empathetic, and empowering.

Equity and Inclusion - Standards must be applicable across diverse identities, experiences, and needs.

Quality and Innovation - Encourage services to strive for continuous improvement through innovation and evidence-based approaches.

Continuity and Achievability - Services should be able to accredit (and reaccredit) through a structured and supportive process.

Co-production and Sector Leadership - Input from survivors, service providers, and experts will shape the standards, ensuring they are grounded and relevant.

Timelines for Revised Standards
